Walter Gex recommended to US bench

BY DENA BISNETTE

Senator Thad Cochran has recommended that Walter J. Gex III of Diamondhead be nominated for a federal judge post in Mississippi's Southern District.

According to Cochran's letter asking that President Ronald Reagan nominate Gex for the post, Gex was selected because he is "an experienced practicing attorney who has excellent judgement, intelligence and a strong sense of fairness."

"I think Walter Gex will be an outstanding judge. He will bring good common sense to the position," Cochran's letter stated.

If Reagan nominates Gex, the appointment must be approved by the Senate Judiciary Committee. That process is expected to take five to six months, according to a spokesman for Cochran's Jackson office.

If approved, Gex will be the second sitting U.S. district judge from Hancock County. The other is Bay St. Louis resident Dan Russell.

The position for which Cochran is recommending Gex is one of two additional Southern District judgeships authorized by Congress in consideration of the area's increasing population and caseload.

At least one of those judges is expected to be from the Gulf Coast area and will be based at the Federal Courthouse in Biloxi, although he will also hear cases at federal courthouses in Hattiesburg, Meridian and Jackson.

For the other post, Cochran has recommended Henry Wingate of Jackson, currently an assistant U.S. attorney for the Southern District.

The district presently has three judges. The salary for a U.S. District Court judge is currently $73,100 per year, the spokesman said.

"I'm delighted that the senator saw fit to recommend me for the post, and if I am confirmed as judge, I hope to do a job that will make the people of this district proud," Gex said.

"It would reflect very well on the area to have two people on the federal judiciary," he added, referring to Russell's service as a U.S. district judge.

Gex is a graduate of University of Mississippi Law School and practiced for nine years with Satterfield, Shell, Williams and Buford of Jackson before joining the Bay St. Louis firm of Gex, Gex and Phillips in 1972.

Gex is president-elect of the Hancock County Bar Association, a commissioner of the Mississippi State Bar Association and secretary-treasurer of the Mississippi Association of County Board Attorneys.

He serves as attorney for the Hancock County Board of Supervisors and is a member of the Waveland Regional Wastewater Management District board of directors.

Funding available for Gulfview despite high architect fees

BY DENA BISNETTE

A proposed six-classroom addition to Gulfview Elementary School may be eligible for some state funding despite a Hancock County School Board decision to pay a seven percent architectural fee.

Frank Lovell of the State Educational Finance Commission said Monday in a telephone interview from Jackson that only six percent of any state funding received on the project could be spent for architect's fees.

Lovell said his office recommends that school boards select architects with fees of six percent or less of the total cost of any new construction, but said the board was "well within its authority" when it approved Fred Wagner as architect by a four-to-one vote Saturday morning.

"Fred Wagner's a good architect but I wouldn't pay my brother more than six percent," Lovell commented.

He also said that the board's decision would have no effect on the priority given to the district's application for funds.

"As far as the EFC is concerned, they're eligible for up to $15 per square foot of new construction and how much of that they can get depends on how much credit the district has with us."

"We'll keep telling them how ridiculous it is to pay this much, but if the board wants to do it and the taxpayers are satisfied to have their money thrown away we'll help fund it," Lovell said.

He added that the application for funding may not be filed until after preliminary architectural work is completed. Once filed, it will take about three months to process.

Superintendent of Education Terrell Randolph estimated the total cost of the addition to be $330,000, with seven percent or $23,000 going to Wagner.

The district will have to make up the difference between the $2,300 and the $1,980 Wagner would have been paid had he charged six percent.

Randolph said the local funding for the project will come from surplus funds obtained through several sources including timber sales and part of a one-time $458,600 fee Mississippi Power Company paid for rights-of-way for a 500 kilovolt power line crossing 16th section land.

Randolph said the addition is "badly needed" because Gulfview has grown more than any other school in the district over the past few years and already has more than 600 students.

The future growth rate is currently estimated at 15 percent or 50 to 60 students per year.

Some Gulfview students are presently attending classes in a house across the street from the school campus and at Clermont Harbor School. Randolph said these students as well as new ones will use the additional classrooms.

Wagner said Tuesday that the addition would be ready for the 1986-87 school year, but could not possibly be completed for the 1985-86 term.

Commission questions BMR management plan

By BRENDA HEATHCOCK

According to a final draft of a management plan for Port Bienville, the county will forfeit the right to use 300 acres in exchange for easy access to building permits on 75 acres.

Hancock County Port and Harbor Commissioner David N. McDonald said he didn't see the gain for the commission in the plan at their regular meeting Monday.

The plan is a part of the Mississippi Coastal Program and was prepared by the Bureau of Marine Resources, the state agency charged with wetlands protection.

Under the plan, the BMR allows for the filling and dredging of about 60 acres of wetlands if the Port and Harbor agrees not to try and develop 300 other acres designated as wetlands.

In addition to the loss of acreage, a major hitch in the adoption of the plan is that by giving up these acres, the Port and Harbor Commission could be required to pay $450,000.

The 2,400 acre industrial park was originally purchased with development bonds from the Economic Development Administration and the commission is required to pay $1,500 per acre in use.

In a letter after a general review of the plan, EDA said they would require of the Port and Harbor Commission "a letter of request that includes enough information for this agency to determine exactly what you want to do and how you propose to compensate for the release of the property that will be used to implement the plan."

Several commissioners along with Director James C. DeBlanc believe that the commission may have to pay for each acre they may give up under the management plan.

BMR Director Richard Leard offered the assistance of his agency in contacting EDA to see if the county

No on duty police officers campaigning, Bay chief says

By BRENDA HEATHCOCK

A controversy surrounding political signs continued this week as Bay St. Louis Police Chief Murray Ladner was confronted by persons claiming that on-duty police officers had been seen putting up signs.

Ladner stated that this was absolutely untrue and that no on-duty police officer has put up any campaign signs.

"I want the public to know that this police department is not involved in politics on any level," he said.

Ladner added that when members of the department were off duty, they had the right to assist the candidate of their choice, but while on duty no officer would be campaigning.

"Mayor Larry Bennett advised us to stay out of politics when we are on-duty and as long as an officer is on city time they will not be putting up signs," Ladner said.

He added that if anyone sees an officer getting out of a patrol car with a political sign, they should call the police department immediately and report it to him.

"An officer may stop and speak to someone putting up a sign but they will not be putting them up," he said.

Ladner said the allegations of police officers putting up political signs had become such an issue that some officers were making special effort not to stop their patrol cars near a sign.

"They hear rumors just like anybody else but when off duty, the officers can do what they want to," he said.

Ladner said he could not blame department officers for supporting the current administration, because they were actually campaigning for their jobs.

He added that there have been people already who have come in the police department and inquired about when a certain officer who they saw putting up signs was on duty.

"The records are open and I welcome anyone to check it out because I really want to know if an on duty officer is involved in politics," he said.

"I just don't think you get a good combination when you mix politics and law enforcement," Ladner said.

He also said anyone caught putting down signs of any candidate would be taken to the police department.

"We will then call the candidate to see if he wants to sign an affidavit

South Central Bell reports bill changes

South Central Bell customers in Mississippi will find their bills a little thinner starting in April, according to local manager, Ott Brockman.

"We're making some minor changes that should make it easier for our customers to understand their bills, and at the same time, we'll be saving money," said Brockman.

The payment card that customers have returned with their payment in the past won't be there any more, he said. Instead, the customers will return the top page of the bill.

"By letting the customer return the top page of the bill rather than the card, South Central Bell will save on postage, because the content of the envelope will be lighter. And, of course, we won't have to pay for the cards either," he said.

He said the company expects to save a total of $600,000 a year—$350,000 of it in postage alone—by eliminating the card. The change will not require any additional pages in the bill.

The redesigned front page of the bill will fit into a window envelope which customers will use to return their payment.

Metairie accident victim is grandson of Bay couple

The grandson of a Bay St. Louis couple was killed Saturday when he was impaled on a fence pipe in an automobile accident on Interstate 10, Jefferson Parish authorities said.

Owen M. Grey, 3728 Bunker Hill Drive, Metairie, died on the scene of the accident at I-10 and Severn Avenue, said Sgt. Susan Miller, a spokesman for the Jefferson Parish Sheriff's Office.

He was the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Biehl II of Bay St. Louis. Grey was a passenger in a 1978 Pontiac Catalina driven by Gary Morel, 18, 3405 Taft Park, Metairie.

The accident occurred at 11:27 p.m.

Morel was driving westbound on the interstate when he lost control of his car and it crashed through the fence running alongside the roadway, Miller said.

"A fence pipe pierced the victim's head," she said.

The driver was slightly injured in the accident. He was treated at East Jefferson General Hospital, Miller said. There were other passengers in the car but they were not injured.

Miller said the case has been referred to the district attorney's office for investigation.

County Agent's Notes

By Lee Taylor

Watch Those Old Tractors!

Farmers and homeowners are out these days cranking and operating thousands of small farm and garden tractors to handle a host of jobs.

Many of these tractors are getting old. Some are dangerous and unfortunately the cause of a great number of accidents and several deaths every year in our state.

Many of these old tractors still used for plowing, mowing and pulling loads are old gas burners with worn brakes, dragging starters and slack steering. Although they are still capable of pulling their weight, they have become more hazardous to operate and do not have the safety features that are found on newer models.

Even new tractors can be hazardous to operate under certain conditions such as with novice operators, in rough terrain or if mechanical failure of the tractor occurs. That's why farmers and homeowners with older tractors need to exercise an extra dose of caution to maintain safety.

A number of safety hints to remember include the following:

—Never jump start a disabled tractor by hooking booster cables directly to the starter. Hitching directly to the starter bypasses the safety devices and may start a tractor in gear and run over the operator or a bystander. Always hitch up to the battery and keep in mind that old tractors may have positive ground electrical systems.

Remember, too, that a certain amount of mechanical skill is necessary to safely service equipment and to keep older tractors operating.

—The tractor operator should always be sitting in the tractor seat before starting it and should kill the engine and set the brakes before dismounting for any reason. The only exception to this would be for temporary stationary operations of power take off equipment.

—Never step off a running tractor or crank the tractor while standing next to it.

—Don't carry passengers on a tractor.

—If the tractor has a roll bar and a seat belt, then fasten the seat belt for maximum protection.

—Don't let people stand behind, in front of or near the tractor while it is running. A shifting mistake or a foot slipping off a clutch could mean a run over. Never let someone step between the wheels to talk while the tractor is running.

—Power take off shafts that connect to mowers, clippers or tillers should be guarded. Regardless of guards, however, it is a good idea to keep people away from the shaft and kill the engine before going near the shaft or servicing the equipment. Stepping over or riding on the rear of a tractor with a shaft running can be a fatal mistake.

—Avoid driving over humps, into ditches or down steep ditch banks where a stump hold, bump or a slip into a drop off could cause the tractor to roll over on top of the operator.

—Tractors that burn gas can provide a fire hazard during refueling. A switch should be turned off and a tractor should be allowed to cool down before gassing up. An unseen spark from spark plug wires or a hot exhaust system could start a fire that could injure the operator and destroy the tractor. Carrying a fire extinguisher on a tractor is a good idea.

—Most tractors are not designed for public road traffic. Those operated on a road should exhibit a bright orange triangular slow moving vehicle emblem on the rear so other vehicles can quickly recognize them.

How About Those Figs?

Figs remain one of the most popular backyard fruit trees planted in Mississippi. Moisture is vital to general health and the delicious rewards this fruit can provide us.

Most fig roots are near the soil surface and are very susceptible to drying. Figs also are susceptible to soil-borne nematodes that devour small roots, leading to reduced water movement into the trees. For this reason, homeowners need to pay more attention to watering fig trees, particularly during times in the spring and summer when rainfall is scarce.

Saturday, May 4, will be a big day at the Navy-NSTL Special Olympics.

The event was such a tremendous success two years, and every participant and volunteer really enjoyed themselves.

Citizens can help in many ways, such as fund raising, work with a special olympic athletes, and various other areas during the big day.

Each special olympic athlete has a coach for the day, workers are needed to conduct the many special events, serve food, and various other functions.

Many businesses and individuals are also sponsoring a special olympic athlete at $15 each, this goes for the tee shirts, medals and ribbons, etc.

Many volunteers and sponsors have been signed, but, like everything else a few more can be used.

If you would like to receive further information call Wally Alston, special coordinator at 688-4367.

We hope to see you at the special olympics.

Alston says anyone interested in just witnessing the event, pack a picnic lunch and come on out.

Over the years much work has been done in Bay-Waveland and Hancock County by the Humane Society in helping with animal control.

The spay-neuter service has helped tremendously in reducing the number of animals.

The Bay-Waveland Humane Society's Flea Market in the Civic Center on Coleman Avenue in Waveland has extended its hours of operation to include Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. The facility is also open on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Fridays during the same hours.

Profits from the flea market are used to fund the society's spay-neuter program through which pet owners requesting assistance with spay or neutering expenses are reimbursed half the cost of the operation.

Society spokesman Rosemary Malandra reports assistance requests run unusually high at this time of year.

The society is also seeking donated items it can offer for sale at the flea market. Call 467-9548 for pick-up.

The society deserves special recognition for its spay-neuter program as well as for the many other services offered to the people and animals of the county.

Thousands of homeless, sick or unwanted animals are put to death each year at the Hancock County Animal Shelter, but the Humane Society's spay-neuter program helps keep that tragic number from rising significantly higher.

So, if you are looking for a good bargain, and want to help a very worthy cause, shop the Humane Society's Flea Market.

Hancock North Central football coaches see school 'on the athletic bottom'

Bay St. Louis

Dear Sir:

We, the football coaching staff at Hancock North Central, are writing in regard to an April 21, article in a Biloxi newspaper entitled "Coaches Ask More Money from Hancock."

We would like to clear up some misconceptions in this article.

After going through proper channels we asked and were put on the agenda to speak at the school board meeting on Saturday, April 21.

We were all prepared to take personal leave to do this. Upon our arrival at school on April 21, we were told that we would be docked a day's pay if we missed school.

So this prevented us from attending the board meeting and from having a representative to answer any questions which would concern the football coaching staff there.

We, as football coaches, are not asking for an increase in supplement. Even though we have not received a raise in many years.

We are only asking to be paid for the extra days we have to work during preseason which are not covered in our contract.

Mississippi High School Athletic Association, MHSAA, states that we have to practice 20 days prior to the first game.

This means football coaches have to work approximately 10 extra days a year. We have never been paid for these days.

Ms. Necaise stated, "Basketball coaches could say they are responsible for more games." These games are played during the regular 182 days of our contracts, not any extra days. We wish we only had to worry about the number of games we play.

The article also quoted the board that we need to look at schools our size to see what the average supplement is.

Of all the schools we compete against in football, every school except one, Pearl River Central, pays its football coaches for the extra preseason days.

However, Pearl River Central's assistant coaches receive a $2,400 a year supplement.

This article also said assistant coaches receive $1,000, which is not true. Assistants receive $500 when they start and a $100 increase each year worked, up to $1,600.

It was also quoted in the article that the HNC coaches feel like they have the school board over a barrel in their efforts to get increases in supplements.

Quite the contrary, Ms. Necaise, it is you who have us over the barrel!

It is not true that we received a teaching contract and we refused to sign it.

We did receive one contract that said teacher and coach. We were told if we didn't agree to coach, we would not have a teaching position.

At Hancock we have never received a separate teaching contract. So how could we possibly have anyone over a barrel?

Mr. Randolph stated that he was asked to provide another football coach. We are the only school of the schools we play against that have more basketball coaches than football coaches.

We have five basketball coaches and four football coaches for grades 7-12.

Every school we compete against has more football coaches than we do. So why not compare this factor, too?

Moreover, we have the smallest football program budget of any of the schools we compete against. We also have the lowest paid head football coach, and he has been at HNC for 16 years!

We work approximately 495 hours a year for football duties. This amounts to $2.02 an hour. You can see we are really asking a lot to be paid for the extra days we have to work.

You might say, "you must be crazy to do it," but we all love coaching and don't want to do anything else. However it seems we are being forced to.

In closing, Mr. Monvel Cuevas said, "As for coaches, we need to look at schools our size and see what the average is so we know where we're at."

We only hope that you, the Hancock County School Board, will do this. Then you will find out we are far behind the other schools in the support their athletic programs receive.

We are on the athletic bottom.

New school board doing business the same old way

April 22, 1985
Editor
The Sea Coast Echo
Bay St. Louis

Dear Sir:

It seems to me that the Hancock County School Board has proven to be an embarrassment and financial burden to the county, given the recent decision to hire Fred Wagner at a seven percent fee as project architect for the Gulfview School.

Mr. Wagner in February removed himself from consideration for this project, probably because he realized that the time constraints for a fall opening could not be accomplished with his current backlog of other projects.

Also, since his requested fee was higher than allowed by the state to receive construction funding, it was suggested that if an architect could be found to work within the six percent allowance then the state money could be available for use by the county school board.

At that time other architects, including myself, offered various proposals to do this project within a fee structure that would allow state aid to be available for its construction.

Now if the school board has accepted Mr. Wagner's seven percent fee structure, it appears that this state funding might be lost.

When you stand back and look at the whole selection process, you can see the reasoning for the school board's decision.

In February, when Mr. Wagner decided against doing the Gulfview job, there was time to hire another architect and possibly have the job finished for a fall opening date.

By delaying the decision until nearly May, there would definitely be no time to finish the project for fall, thereby allowing Mr. Wagner plenty of time to fit this in his schedule.

I ask, is Mr. Wagner the exclusive architect for any work done in Hancock County?

Why go through the motions of the selection process?

I understand that the Gulfview School is just the icing on the cake and that there is a seven-million-dollar school construction project in the wings.

In the meeting two weeks ago the board said that they would invite the other architects under consideration to address the next meeting with their proposals.

No such invitation was made to me, nor was any effort made to investigate my qualifications.

Was any contact made with the other architects to appear at this meeting to offer their proposals?

This decision has been made and I feel all future architect selection decisions have already been made, too.

The county school system will now pay extra in lost time and money because the school board will not accept that there are other qualified professionals willing to work with them in the design of schools needed.

Why should we spend our time and money preparing job proposals when all is ignored by the school board?

This letter should not be viewed as an assault on Mr. Wagner. He is a very qualified and able architect. He stated his fee and removed himself from consideration early on in February.

It seems that the Hancock County School Board has changed in membership only but not in its way of doing business since the last Gulfview nightmare.

Isn't it time to start spending our tax dollars so as to give the children of this community 100 cents on the dollar in return?

Color Blindness

Only a very small percentage of severely afflicted color-defective people—a more accurate description than color blind—see anything in a monotone. Most people with congenital, hereditary color-vision defects have difficulty distinguishing shades in the red-green or blue-yellow spectrum.

Among those categorized as red-green defective, fewer than 30 percent are likely to confuse pure red and pure green. They do have difficulty, however, distinguishing between browns, olives and golds. They see pastel colors—pinks, oranges, yellows and greens—as similar to each other, and purples are confused with blues.

By contrast, people with the blue-yellow color defect never confuse purple with blue. They can readily distinguish golds and olives from each other. However, they do tend to confuse pastel blue with pastel green and pastel yellow, in addition to perceiving some deep blues as grey.

Red-green defects are more highly common than blue-yellow defects, but all color-vision defects are relatively rare. In the United States, congenital and hereditary color-vision defects affect about eight percent of the males and one-half of one percent of the females.

The gene that carries color-defective vision is carried by females, but it is unusual for a female to have congenital and hereditary color-defective vision. Moreover, there is no correlation between congenital and hereditary color-defective vision and other vision problems.

An acquired color deficit occasionally may result from such optic nerve diseases as multiple sclerosis. In those cases, the defect is usually in the blue-yellow spectrum. Patients with acquired color-vision defects frequently report that the colors of familiar objects have changed.

Some color-vision defective people are not aware of their inability to recognize all colors because they have lived with the condition since birth. The color-vision defective person may not realize that he does not perceive color the way others do until people start commenting that they are wearing bizarre color combinations.

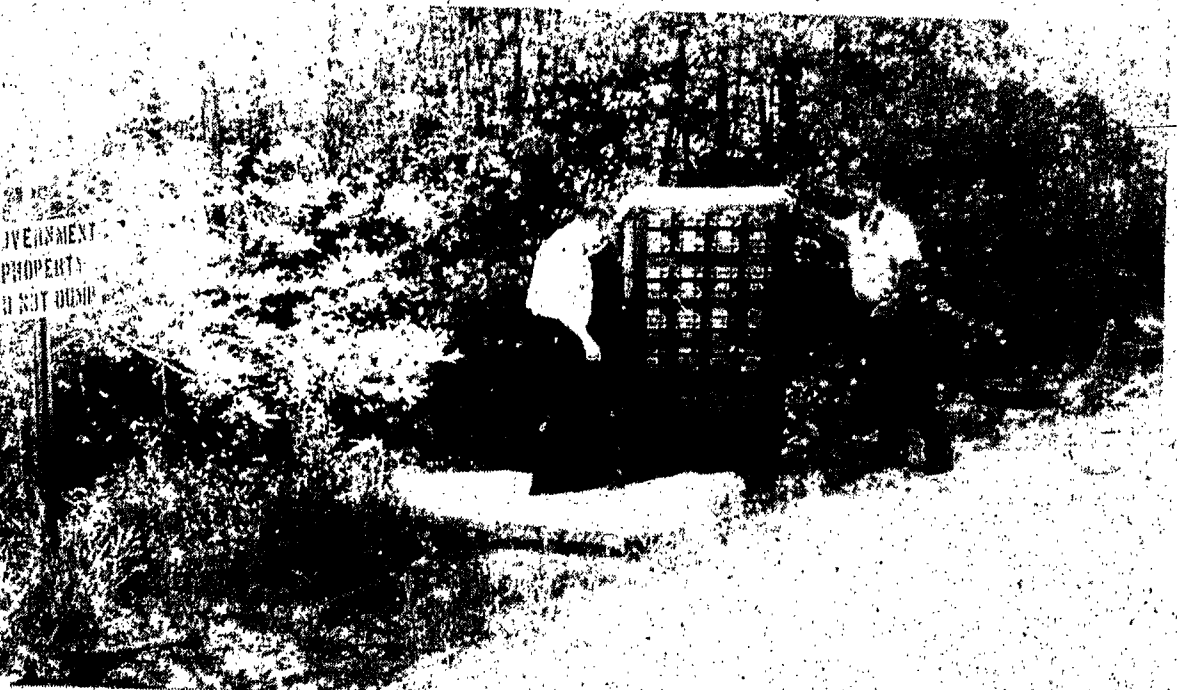

Most color-vision defective people find ways of compensating for the problem. They make up their own gradations of shades based on depth of color and saturation, which they can recognize. They may enlist the help of others in color-coding their wardrobe so that they wear color-coordinated clothing.

ILLEGAL DUMPING—Hancock County Deputy Sheriff Matt Karl, right, and Auxiliary Deputy Bobby Ray Necaise check for clues to the identity of persons responsible for illegal dumping of used tires along Bayou LaCrosse Road. Karl reported the arrest Friday of James Jordan, 48, who was charged with littering in connection with the dumping. Officers said Jordan holds a contract with a local tire business to haul the used tires to the county dump.

SIGNS APPARENTLY IGNORED—A sign at left on Bayou LaCrosse Road states, "Government Property, Do Not Dump." Hancock County Deputy Sheriff Matt Karl, right, and Bobby Ray Necaise, auxiliary deputy, check old bedding illegally dumped. Hancock County officials and Governmental agencies have cleaned the area many times in recent years. The area is in the Buffer Zone and is leased or owned by the U.S. Government and some people apparently have a hard time reading the no dumping signs. A few arrests ending up in stiff fines could change their comprehension of signs.

Special events to mark 200th birthday of Audubon, father of birdwatching sport

John James Audubon, the founding father of the sport of birdwatching, the inspiration to generations of wildlife painters, and the unintentional progenitor of the modern conservation movement, will be the subject of art exhibits, lectures, a new postage stamp, innumerable parties, and a family reunion in celebration of the 200th anniversary of his birth.

John James Audubon was born on April 26, 1785 in Santo Domingo (Haiti), the illegitimate son of a French naval officer and his creole mistress.

From the age of 18, Audubon lived in the United States. For much of his life he wandered the North American wilderness from Florida to Newfoundland, identifying many unknown species of birds, painting hundreds of species in full life-size for his "double elephant" folio, "The Birds of America," and describing their behavior in his groundbreaking "Ornithological Biography."

Audubon's extraordinary legacy as both artist and naturalist is being commemorated with special exhibitions of his work in New York City, Lafayette, La., and Charleston, S.C.

The publication of a booklet titled "Audubon Demythologized," the issuance of a 22-cent Audubon postage stamp; and hometown celebrations at Mill Grove, Pa. and Henderson, Ky., where Audubon lived during his early years in this country, are also planned.

In Henderson, a family birthday party will be attended by 15 of John James' descendants.

"Audubon revolutionized bird painting and the way we look at nature," says Les Line, editor of Audubon Magazine, which will publish a special issue on its namesake in May.

"Until he set out to paint all the birds in America, most published bird-drawings had been as static as the stuffed specimens they were based on. But Audubon portrayed his subjects as living, breathing creatures with life histories of their own. And he was the first artist to show birds and other animals in their natural habitat, to picture them as dynamic and dramatic components of the larger ecosystem."

"Audubon's greatest contribution was fostering awareness," according to artist and ornithologist Roger Tory Peterson, whose own bird books have stimulated millions of Americans to take up birdwatching.

"Awareness inevitably leads to concern. Because Audubon opened the eyes of others, it's understandable why he has become the father figure of the conservation movement in North America."

More than three decades after his death in 1851, Audubon still loomed so large as a popularizer of birds and their behavior that the fledgling bird-protection movement took his name for its own.

The National Audubon Society has since grown to 550,000 members, with over 500 chapters nationwide. Like many other national conservation organizations, the Society has, over the years, broadened its mission to include the protection of all life—animal, plant and human—and the air, land and water on which all life depends.

Copies of "Audubon Demythologized," a 16-page, color-illustrated booklet, may be ordered by sending a check for $2 to Information Services, National Audubon Society, 950 Third Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10022. Special rates for bulk orders are available.

JOHN JAMES AUDUBON

No conservationist, Audubon unwittingly founded environmental movement

By Les Line

Editor of 'Audubon'

If John James Audubon could be here for his 200th birthday Friday, he'd no doubt be amazed at the strength and breadth of the conservation movement he unconsciously helped to spawn.

Audubon himself was no conservationist. There seemed little need for such sentiments during his lifetime, the years between the American Revolution and the Civil War when our wildlife and other natural treasures seemed inexhaustible.

And in the eyes of Audubon's in-laws, some of whom had been his partners and creditors in failed business ventures, John James wasn't good for much at all.

"He neglects his material interests," said one, "and is forever wasting his time, hunting, drawing and stuffing birds, and playing the fiddle. We fear he will never be fit for any practical purpose on the face of the earth."

What Audubon did do exceedingly well was to roam the wilds of North America from Florida to Newfoundland, identifying, observing, collecting and drawing the birds of this continent.

Whether his subject was a bald eagle or ruby-throated hummingbird, Audubon painted them life size.

Most important, he was the first wildlife artist to portray birds as living, breathing creatures, and to show them as dynamic and dramatic components of a larger environment.

In so doing, Audubon made millions of Americans aware of birds and of the wonder and beauty of nature. Through his paintings and his lively written descriptions of bird behavior, he sparked a latent interest in America's wild heritage. It is not surprising that, three decades after his death, the fledgling bird-protection movement took his name as its own.

"Audubon's greatest contribution was fostering awareness," says ornithologist Roger Tory Peterson. "Awareness inevitably leads to concern."

There are perhaps 20 million bird-watchers in the United States today, ranging from the casual kitchen-window observer with a backyard bird-feeder to the zealot who will travel to Patagonia for a rare sighting.

If Roger Peterson is the father of this modern birding boom, as many believe, then J.J. Audubon must be the grand-daddy.

"Birds are a vivid expression of life," explains Peterson, "and because of their high rate of metabolism and furious pace of living they reflect change in the environment rather quickly. Birds are indicators of environmental quality—an ecological litmus that sends out warnings when things are out of kilter."

Which may also explain why so many birdwatchers, from Teddy Roosevelt to Rachel Carson, have spearheaded the environmental movement.

Where Audubon present at his 200th birthday party, his response to present-day America would probably be a mixture of distress and joy. He would cry, I think, at the loss of so much of his beloved wilderness and the marvelous wildlife that was integral to it.

But he could only be heartened by the legions of nature lovers who are fighting to preserve what remains of our natural beauty and biological diversity, who are even striving to make amends for man's previous mismanagement by restoring endangered species like the California condor and the whooping crane.

Love of nature is an indispensable ally of the conservation movement, and John James Audubon did much to spread this love. Today, as a consequence, an environmental ethic is ingrained in our national consciousness.

Audubon's namesake organization, founded to protect birds from market hunters and egg collectors, now numbers more than half a million members.

Together with many other citizen conservation groups, the National Audubon Society has broadened its mission to include the protection of all life—animal, plant and human—and the air, land and water on which all life depends.

Happy birthday, John James Audubon—and our heartfelt thanks to you for neglecting your material interests!

This program has provided employment for local workers in the contracting business. The downtown walking tour has been published.

When I first began my terms in public office I was instrumental in getting the school board to bid the interest rate that they would pay for short-term loans. The board was also shown the advantage of investing idle funds in high interest certificates of deposit instead of letting the money sit idle in checking accounts. These activities resulted in tax savings to the property and auto owners in Bay St. Louis because our millage was reduced, and we were able to stretch our school budget dollars even further to help our young people and teachers.

UNRECOGNIZED PINCHED NERVES

Pinched nerve is a term utilized by the Chiropractic profession describing an irritation disturbance of a spinal nerve. Falls, auto accidents, lifting wrong, may cause a displacement of a spinal bone, which then can pinch nerves and interrupt normal nerve function. Some of the more common complaints that may develop from pinched nerves are: dizziness, headaches, nervousness, pain in the chest, stomach, neck or back. Often, a person may not associate his condition with pinched nerves thus allowing these conditions to go unrecognized until an advanced state of illness develops. A consistent Chiropractic examination will lead to early detection and the application of care will aid prompt recovery.

Oh, how happily busy I am just now, trying out recipes for the marvelous "low country" dishes we enjoyed on a tour last week of the "Golden Isles" of Georgia and environs, with special stops also at historic Savannah, Ga., and Charleston, S.C., among other places.

Our trio - Isabel Guilbault and Joyce Schoenberger and I - were part of a bus tour of congenial souls, with ebullient and highly efficient Marion and Jim Garitty of Universal Tours out of New Orleans as our tour directors, and Georgia-born Wade Reese, our driver, as the one who kept the group on course throughout the eight days of our trip.

We didn't ravish the countryside as Sherman did in his infamous march through Georgia during the War Between the States, but we just about devoured everything in sight! And I was elected to ferret out all the secrets I could for the delicious dishes we enjoyed all along the way.

Since our trio is addicted to seafood, rice and sweets of all kinds, we were in culinary heaven, you may be sure, for these are the specialties of the "Low Country."

One of the most enjoyable stops on the tour was that at Middleton Place and Middleton Gardens, out of Charleston, S.C., where we feasted upon chicken pilaf in a delightful pavilion overlooking part of the gardens, with a choice of ice cream or the famed Huguenot Torte for dessert, after walking in the gardens and seeing the plantation house.

Middleton Place, a 5,000-acre plantation bordering the Ashley River, is the site of America's oldest, and considered by many, most elegant landscaped gardens.

History tells us that 100 slaves labored for a decade to complete the terraced lawns, walks, artificial lakes and formal gardens. Designed by Henry Middleton in 1741, the plantation home has known war, fire and even earthquakes, and the gardens, which survived unharmed, were thoroughly retrieved from their overgrown state after the Civil War.

It is conjectured that the Huguenot

Torte was so named because it was originally made by the Huguenots, the French Protestants who swarmed out of France after the revocation of the Edict of Nantes in 1685 - they weren't exiled from France, they just thought it prudent to leave the mother country.

They settled all up and down the Eastern Seaboard, and in South Carolina settled in Charleston, where they intermarried with the English Protestants. They also gave a French touch to many English dishes.

The torte, as a cake form - not to be confused with the tart or tarte - is a blend of French and German or Central European cooking, some say.

As a cake, it is one of the "flourless cakes" - with quantities of crumbs or finely-ground nuts replacing all or a great portion of the usual flour. So, here's the 250-year-old recipe for this delicious crusty, crumbly, apple and pecan torte:

MIDDLETON PLACE'S
HUGUENOT TORTE

2 eggs, room temperature
1 1/4 cup sugar
3/4 cup sifted flour
2 1/2 tsp. baking powder
1/4 tsp. salt
1 tsp. vanilla
1 cup chopped tart apples
1 cup chopped pecans
1 cup heavy cream, whipped
8 maraschino cherries (optional)
Beat eggs until frothy and light lemon-colored. Add sugar gradually to eggs, beating on low speed of electric mixer, add flour, baking powder and salt, and beat at medium speed. Add vanilla and fold in apples and pecans.

Pour mixture into a well-buttered, 8-inch by 12-inch baking pan. Bake at 325 degrees for 30 to 40 minutes, until the mixture is crusty and brown.

To serve, scoop up with a pancake turner, keeping the crusty part on top. Top each serving with a large dollop of whipped cream. Add a cherry to each serving as a garnish, if you like. (eight servings).

Soil Conservation Service to observe 50th anniversary

The Soil Conservation Service will observe its golden anniversary Saturday, April 27, a milestone in a voluntary conservation movement that has involved more than two million farmers, ranchers and other land users.

"SCS can be proud of what it has done," said Peter Myers, chief of the agency. "It has helped to reduce soil erosion, conserve water, reduce flooding, improve rangeland and protect other natural resources. Today, two out of every five acres of farmland are adequately protected against soil erosion."

In Hancock County, more than 450 landowners are involved in conserving natural resources. Innovative farmers here are protecting 6,500 acres with conservation tillage including some no-till.

They are convinced that these are cost-effective and soil-saving practices. Nationwide, farmers used conservation tillage on 29 percent of cropland in 1984.

Conservation tillage today complements efforts of farmers to use contour stripcropping, terraces, crop rotations and other practices that returned eroded fields to productive cropland and pasture. Along the way, SCS has achieved an international reputation in the field of soil and water conservation.

What has been accomplished in 50 years is the result of federal and state agencies and local groups working together to solve the nation's soil and water problems along with the leadership and investments of farmers and ranches.

These accomplishments also needed the support of conservation districts and professional organizations and the dedication of people from all walks of life who feel a sincere sense of stewardship for the land.

Everyone in the United States has benefited from the protection of soil productivity and a cleaner environment. "It's time for celebration as we observe 50 years of soil conservation and it's time for renewed commitment as we look ahead," said Myers.

Energy and space efficiency

Passive solar design works for any style of house

By Karen L. Moore
Mississippi Cooperative
Extension Service

For Jimmy and Virginia Johnson, energy efficiency and functionality rate high in their new home.

The two-story home, north of Jackson, features 10-foot high ceilings downstairs, numerous windows and ash cabinets, and trim throughout the house. The downstairs contains 2,300 square feet with the upstairs containing 1,500 more square feet.

With a house like this, one would expect high utility bills, but this is not the case with the Johnsons' colonial-style home.

"Our average utility bill is about $80 per month," Johnson said.

"Since the upstairs has its own heating and cooling system and hot water heater, we only have those on when we have company, which averages to be about one week of every month," Mrs. Johnson said.

Similar homes in the neighborhood average $200 to $300 per month in utility bills. The house was designed by Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service agricultural engineer Bob Mayo. The Johnsons selected the plan from more than 150 that are available. The house incorporates principles recommended by the Extension Service for a passive solar home.

"A passive solar home can be energy efficient and still be a very traditionally designed home. Any design can be passive solar if it is planned right and the site orientation is correct," Mayo said. "A few simple, but important, principles make the difference."

First, the Johnsons' home has a north/south orientation. This is to take advantage of how the sun appears.

"In the winter, the sun is low to the horizon and so appears more to the south. A maximum amount of exposure to the sun results. In the summer, the sun moves from the low south to overhead and slightly north. A minimum amount of exposure to the sun results," Mayo said.

"The object is to have the long sides of the house facing north and south. Also the maximum amount of glass exposure should be on the south side."

"Research shows this north/south orientation does decrease utility costs. Two identical houses were constructed, one with a north/south orientation and the other with an east/west orientation. The house with north/south orientation, experienced heating bills one-third less and cooling bills two-thirds less than the other house."

The house is built on a conventional foundation with R19 insulation. The higher the R value, the better the insulation.

The exterior walls also contain R19 insulation.

The ceilings contain R39 insulation.

The windows are double-insulated.

The fireplace has a wood insert and is supplemented by a heat pump.

Ceiling fans in the great room, bedrooms and studio decrease the amount of air conditioning needed.

The kitchen is located on the north side to decrease the amount of summer sun. Also extra vents supply more air conditioning.

"The kitchen is the coolest room in the house," Mrs. Johnson said.

Function also plays an important role in the house.

"We planned this house to require little maintenance. It is brick. The columns are aluminum and the roof should last 30 years. The downstairs oak floors have a polyurethane finish and do not require wax. Upstairs we have a better-grade carpet that should last a long time," Johnson said.

"Initially the oak floors and better-grade carpet were more expensive but in the long-run they are cheaper since they should not have to be replaced," Mrs. Johnson said.

The esthetic highlight of the house is the extensive use of ash wood in the kitchen cabinets and woodwork throughout the house. The Johnsons designed the fireplace mantle and fluted moldings around the door facings. Each corner features a rosette design.

"It was difficult to find a local millworker to do the work but we finally got a man interested in taking on such a large project," Johnson said.

The downstairs floor plan features a great room, formal dining room, kitchen and breakfast room, half-bath, sewing and laundry room, a studio for Johnson's framing business and a master bedroom with his-and-hers bath and dressing areas.

The upstairs contains a large storage room, one average-size bedroom, another master suite and an oversized room for the pool table. Two bathrooms connected together join the master suite and hall.

The Johnsons downsized one bedroom into a storage room to make room for the extra bedroom.

"We planned another master suite upstairs in case we ever need the bedroom downstairs for one of our elderly parents," Johnson said.

Johnson is a district program leader for Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service. So he knew of Mayo's work with the housing plan service.

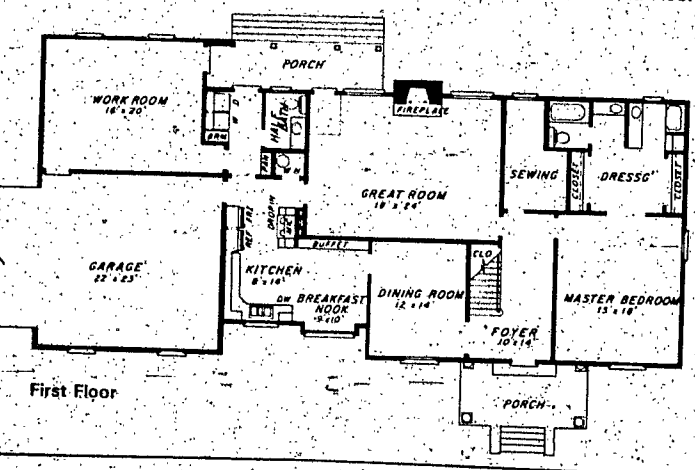

"Often people are familiar with the work of the housing plan service but the public thinks of our plans as designed only for lower- and middle-income families. This house is an excellent example of the opposite," Mayo said. "We want to provide space- and energy-efficient plans to all Mississippians."

The plans are available to consumers, designers and builders, free of charge, from county Extension offices. For the house plan in this article, ask for No. 7242-A.

Cooperative Extension Service plan 7242-A features a total of 3800 sq. ft. on two levels. The first floor contains a workroom for a home business along with a double garage, kitchen with breakfast room, formal dining room, a great room, sewing room and a his-and-hers dressing room with a master bedroom. The second floor contains three bedrooms, one bathroom and a game room.

Japanese markets may open for Gulf squid

Squid, butterflyfish and other underutilized seafood resources in Gulf of Mexico waters may find a new market in Japan through the cooperative efforts of Congressman John Breaux of Louisiana, the National Marine Fisheries Service (NMFS), Gulf Coast Research

Laboratory (GCRL) in Ocean Springs and Louisiana State University. Congressman Breaux, chairman of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries subcommittee, invited a private Japanese association, the Overseas Fishery Cooperation Foundation, to investigate the Gulf's potential for various species not commonly harvested by American fishermen.

The Japanese cooperative sent a research vessel last fall for a three-segment thirty-day investigative cruise which indicated few squid but promising numbers of butterflyfish, a species with world market potential. Congressman Breaux asked the group to return for a spring research trip, when squid catches are expected to be more populous.

Three additional cruises of 10-12 days each are scheduled by the Japanese between April 15 and May 30. The Japanese research vessel will be equipped with gear specially designed for squid capture. The expeditions will concentrate on Gulf waters of 20 to 250 fathoms, areas not heavily fished by American fishermen.

NMFS, GCRL and LSU worked together to develop a research plan for the upcoming Japanese trip, including sampling procedures and

"The Japanese interest in our seafood resources could be a great benefit to both of our countries," Dr. McIlwain emphasized. "Squid, butterflyfish and other fish underutilized by our domestic markets could help to meet the demand in Japan and other foreign countries for these varieties, which in turn could help to curb the growing American fisheries trade deficit."

protocol, optimum fishing locations, ship-to-shore communications, port calls, fueling, food, customs and other details. During a preliminary visit during March, Japanese representatives toured NMFS and GCRL research facilities, as well as several seafood processing plants in the area.

Dr. Thomas D. McIlwain, GCRL assistant director for fisheries research and management, has been actively involved in coordinating plans for the research cruises by the Japanese.

Mother of nine goes back to school, daddy stays at home

"Sometimes I feel as if I'm two different people," says Gayle Carter, a PRC student and mother of nine.

Mrs. Carter lives in Bilbo Hall on PRC's campus during the week and in Waveland with her family on weekends. During the week her husband, Danny Carter, stays with their nine children.

Mrs. Carter says her new life began after the birth of her ninth child. "After all the years of giving myself totally to my family, because that is the way I wanted it, Danny felt that I should do something for me. He knew how I loved high school. Because I was a good student, he encouraged me to consider college," Mrs. Carter said.

Before Mrs. Carter decided to come to PRC, she considered going to the PRC vo-tech school at Stennis Airport for a nine-month LPN nursing course.

"I spoke to a few people. Some suggested going to PRC to get an associate degree. My husband and I talked it over. I felt I should really stay home with my baby until he was at least in preschool. I'm a strong believer that a mother should be with her children, especially when they are little. But, yet, I also wanted to go to school. It was a hard decision," Mrs. Carter said.

Carter suggested that the number one priority should be to help her go to school at PRC. Mrs. Carter said, "It sounded great, but saying it and doing it were two different things."

Mrs. Carter said her husband began to think about getting his work hours arranged around her school schedule because he knew how strongly she felt about not leaving their kids.

"He was working at a Waveland discount store and decided to see if they could help him work around my schedule. They were not able to help," Carter said.

With only two weeks before PRC's registration, Mrs. Carter had to make a decision.

"We made a fantastic decision.

Danny decided to find another job that would allow him to stay home and work around my schedule," she said.

Fantastic as this decision was, it was also a very frightening decision for the Carters because it involved giving up hospitalization and retirement benefits.

Carter was able to get two part-time jobs, one with the American Legion Post in Waveland and the other with the Waveland Police Department. Mrs. Carter said, "Between these two little 'bitty' jobs, we figured we could make it."

However, Mrs. Carter said, "I kept thinking of all the things that could go wrong...the kids getting sick, me having a wreck commuting, etc. But Danny would not let me think negatively. He said, 'You think positive. We're going to do this together.'"

Consequently, in the fall of '83, Mrs. Carter became a PRC student with hopes of eventually being accepted into the associate degree nursing program. A year later, Mrs. Carter's dream came true. She was accepted. However, she declined the nursing program's offer after making the decision to get a BS degree in nursing.

When Mrs. Carter graduates from PRC in May, she plans to immediately enroll in USM's summer program. If she maintains her present grade-point average, she will enter USM with a 4.0 GPA.

Mrs. Carter says that without the encouragement she has received from her husband, and two very special PRC instructors, Susan Donohue and Glenn Hicks, she would not have made it this far. In fact, it was because of their encouragement that she made her decision not to accept the nursing program at PRC, but, instead, to go on and obtain a BS degree.

When asked how she first felt about coming to PRC, Mrs. Carter said, "Even though I felt like I was caught in a whirlwind the day of registration, I remember after registration looking down at my schedule and having a really good feeling. When I came home that day, my husband looked into my face and knew how happy I was. We both knew that we had made the right decision."

Their children's reaction was somewhat different. Mrs. Carter said, "My kids just wanted to know who was going to do the cooking and washing. But I said, 'Hey, you guys are real smart. You'd be surprised what you can do. All you have to do to wash and dry clothes is push a button.'"

"It wasn't that they weren't used to working, but the thought of my not being there all the time was frightening to them. So, they sort of went in to a state of semi-shock," Mrs. Carter said.

During Mrs. Carter's first year at the River she commuted by bus from her home in Waveland.

But after a year of commuting, Mrs. Carter said, "I felt and looked like I'd been hit by a truck. I had to get up at 5 a.m. and wouldn't get back home until after 4 p.m. Then soon after coming home I would have to lock myself in my room in order to study. It was really hard trying to keep my grades up like I wanted to."

Realizing what his wife was going through, Carter suggested that she look into living in a dorm on campus. Mrs. Carter said that her immediate reaction was, "No. There is no way I'm going to leave my family."

But Carter continued to try and persuade his wife, and in the fall of '84 Mrs. Carter moved into Bilbo Hall.

Mrs. Carter says, "Even though we have done well up to now, it's still an adjustment and it's difficult at times. I don't think we'll ever be completely adjusted to it, but then I don't think we should completely adjust to being apart."

"The one thing that keeps us going is that I only have two more years after this year. Two years may seem like a long time, but it has already been almost two years."

Mrs. Carter says she also plans to live on USM's campus when she continues her college career there. She said, "Because it's easier on my husband when I'm home, we have thought about my going to the USM branch in Long Beach. But because they are limited in what they can offer and because the nursing courses will require long hours of concentration, we feel it would be better for me to go on to Hattiesburg and live on campus."

Mrs. Carter laughed and said she told her husband the next thing she knew he would be telling her to get a Ph.D. and live in Washington, D.C. She added, "I'm just getting farther and farther away. But Danny is just so encouraging and tells me it's going to work out. Because my grades have been so good, he feels we shouldn't jeopardize that."

When asked if she could supply any words of wisdom for other mothers who may be thinking of going back to school, she said, "Women should realize their lives are important too. I'm not putting being a housewife or mother down because that is the most important job in the world, but women can do more than that."

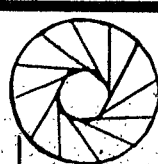

They usually won't...maybe because they are afraid. I was afraid when I started to school. And I think I hid behind my family by saying, 'I can't leave ya'll,' when I was really just not confident enough. And if you don't have a husband who is encouraging, it makes it even harder. An encouraging and understanding husband is most important."

Mrs. Carter is on the President's List, a member of Who's Who in American Junior Colleges and is a member of the American Legion Auxiliary Post 77.

Mrs. Carter is an inspiration for any PRC student who feels discouraged or has lost hope. She is pursuing an education in the face of difficulties that would crush most people.

Mrs. Carter's success shows that when we have determination coupled with encouragement and love, no task is too great.

Hancock coaches stifled on job improvement bid

BY DENA BISNETTE

Four Hancock North Central football coaches say a school board plan to obtain information on coaches' pay supplements in other districts is not needed.

The coaches, including Irvin Favre, Tim Favre, Joe Shaw and Rocklin Gaudin, say they have been trying to present the board with that information for at least a year.

"Every time we tried to go through channels, we haven't gotten any results," Gaudin said.

The board met Saturday and authorized Superintendent Terrell Randolph to survey other districts about coaches' pay supplements after discussing rumors that several coaches planned to resign if their current supplements are not raised.

According to Irvin Favre, head football coach, the coaches had expected to appear at the meeting to discuss supplements and other proposals for improving the school's athletic programs, but were told that they would be docked a day's pay if they skipped Saturday classes to do so.

Gaudin said Monday that supplements were not the major issue although they were included in the proposals to be presented.

"The main reason we're considering resigning is that the board just won't let us air our views."

The four have until Wednesday to sign their contracts.

Irvin Favre and the other three coaches said they were upset by published statements attributed to a school board member which implied that all the coaches want is more money.

According to Irvin Favre, the four want additional money only to bring coaching supplements up to the standards of other nearby schools and to expand coaching contracts to cover pre-season practice days.

According to a survey of football opponents the coaches say they conducted in 1984, Hancock North Central ranks 11th out of 11 schools in the amount of supplement paid its head coach. Supplements for assistant coaches rank ninth.

Assistant coaches at Hancock currently receive $1,000 per year. Of that $1,000, the basic supplement is $500, with $100 added for each year of experience up to five years. Irvin Favre, as a head coach with 20 years experience, receives $2,070 per year.

The coaches say their survey found only one of Hancock's 10 football opponents with no contract provisions for pre-season practice. Hancock also has none and the coaches would like to have one, since they currently work most of the pre-season without being under contract.

Gaudin explained that many coaches are under a 10-month contract to compensate for the 20 days of practice; the Mississippi High School Athletic Association requires prior to the first game, usually the first week of school.

At Hancock North Central, however, coaching contracts begin the same day teaching contracts do.

Shaw pointed out that the two contracts are not separate. They are headed 'teacher-coach.'

According to Gaudin, the coaches have learned that school board attorney Joseph Gex has told the board that the four were hired back as teachers, but had the right not to accept their coaching contracts.

"How can we do that when they're the same contract?" said Gaudin.

Lennette Necaise has been quoted as saying we have the school board over a barrel because they'll be stuck without football coaches if we don't sign. We're the ones over a barrel. We have only 10 days to sign these contracts after we get them and some years we don't even get to see them until August.

The coaches' proposals also include the addition of one assistant coach, additional funding for football equipment, restoration of the fifth and sixth grade football program discontinued several years ago, additional supplements for coaches of spring sports, addition of a track program and construction of a baseball field on land adjacent to the school campus.

Irvin Favre said help is needed in these areas because Hancock North Central has been unable to compete successfully with other schools in sports other than football.

He said all four coaches feel that athletics are important to students, although they should not take precedence over academics.

He also said the coaches would abandon the proposals for the present if the board said there were no funds available.

"However, the four have gotten no further than board president Billie Lyons, who says she has tried to present their proposals several times."

"All I wanted Saturday was to allow these men to present their views," she said.

Instead, Necaise questioned her on the legality of calling a special Saturday board meeting late Friday afternoon.

Gex said the meeting was legal. Although Necaise received word Friday night, Superintendent Terrell Randolph and other board members said they learned of the meeting late Thursday.

Randolph said Monday that the coaches were also notified and could have appeared at his request if they had taken personal leave to attend the meeting.

He said the addition will take "eight or nine months to complete, not counting the time it takes for bidding procedures."

Wagner also commented that he "was surprised" by his selection for the job because he had told the board in February he no longer wished to be considered.

At that time, Wagner told the board that he understood the project would lose priority for funding if the architectural fee was more than six percent. He also told the board he felt he could not do "the job this district needs" for less than seven percent.

"I knew absolutely nothing about this until Sunday, when someone told me my name had figured prominently in a headline in the Sea Coast Echo," he explained.

Wagner's selection has resulted in complaints from at least one school board member and one of the other architects vying for the job.

Board member Lennette Necaise questioned the hiring of Wagner Saturday because she felt the fee was too high in comparison to fees of several other architects who submitted proposals to the board.

She voted against board president Billie Faye Lyons' recommendation of Wagner, stating that she felt the work could be obtained at a lower cost.

Reeves said he feels the board should have proceeded with the selection of another architect immediately after Wagner withdrew in February. "By waiting, they've taken off the pressure to finish the job by fall," he explained.

He said he believes Wagner had a backlog of several jobs at the time and could not have given the Gulfview project the priority it needs.

ed.

In addition, Reeves called attention to board statements that other architects would be invited to present their proposals at one of the board's public meetings.

"I was upset because they said they were going to call the other architects in and never did. I never contacted me once. I always had to contact them. After I saw a newspaper article about it on April 7 I wrote to them and reemphasized my interest, but they never called," he said.

Reeves alleged that Wagner was selected for the Gulfview job because he is under consideration as architect for a district-wide, long-range building project currently proposed by the board.

"Is he the exclusive architect for the school district?" Reeves asked.

Reeves called the school board "an embarrassment and financial burden to the county" and said he feels taxpayers will end up paying extra because of the higher architectural fee and the delay in beginning construction.

... CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1A could be excused from paying for acreage forfeited as wetlands. Giving up 300 acres as wetlands will nearly halve the remaining acreage available in the park, DeBlanc said.

Of the original 2,400 acres, about 1,000 was used in road and canal construction and utility rights-of-way.

Currently there are 12 companies operating in the park occupying approximately 700 acres, which leaves only 700 acres available for development.

The commission will take further action on the plan after they have received a reply from EDA requesting to be excused from paying the $450,000.

In other business, the commission authorized a second partial payment of $14,125 to Caldwell Tank, Inc. This payment is for foundation work for an elevated water storage tank at Stennis International Airport.

They also passed a resolution to advertise for bids for paving the entrance road at Stennis.

Dillman, Inc. Dynamite Girls Under-12 soccer team has won the District 4 Championships with two wins, one tie, and only one goal scored against them in tournament play.

This is Dynamite's second consecutive District Championship in their two years of play.

Eight of the 16 team members moved up from last year's Under-10 division, four remained in the Under-12 division, and four girls who had never played soccer were added to the team.

Coaches Kathy Edwards and Rachel Weinstein praised the team's level of play, especially since 11 of the players are in the younger half of the age group.

The State Championships will be held in Southwest Jackson the weekend of May 4 and 5.

Each team is required to have two sets of jerseys. The Dynamite alternate jersey will be provided by Copytech of Gulfport, and the team will be referred to as Dillmann/Copytech Dynamite.

To help defray the cost of meals and lodging, the team is having a ham po-boy sale this Friday, April 26.

The cost is $2.50 and deliveries will be made by 11:30 a.m. To place an order, call Debbie Heitzmann at 467-2643 or Kathy Edwards at 467-1082.

U-10 Boys

The U-10 District Runner-up Bernard Construction "Royal Knights" earned their win the hard way, playing through the losers' bracket.

After a 1-0 loss to SMCS No. 1 in the second game of district, the Knights started a long series of games to work their way to the top.

With a 4-1 win over Biloxi No. 1, the Knights again met SMCS No. 1 on Thursday night.

The Knights never gave an inch and topped SMCS No. 1 with a score of 4-0.

Friday night matched the Knights with SMCS No. 3, who fell 3-0 to the determined Knights. Saturday morning the Knights met SMCS No. 2, who had not played since Sunday, for the final game.

Despite the exhaustion of Friday night's game and the heat of the day, the Knights held their own and beat SMCS No. 2 by a score of 3-0.

The offensive unit led by Danny Harville, Scott Pepperman, Austin Schmelzer, and Richard Watson, scored a total of 18 goals during district tournament with outstanding support from Scott Gelpi, Bert Courregge, Steven Senes, Zack Corbell, Chris Russ and Mike Benvenuti.

The "dynamic trio," Scott Emmel, Beau Schindler and Shawn Keener and "Goalie" Brett Ladner held all opponents to only 2 goals. Congratulations to Bernard Construction "Royal Knights" for their outstanding performance in the District IV playoffs and the best of luck at the State Tournament May 4 and 5 in Jackson.

U-14 Girls

The U-14 Girls Canon Copier "Canonballs" rolled over Ocean Springs

The U-14 Girls played as a total team in Saturday's win over OSSO No. 1, looking like a State Champion team.

The offensive scoring of Julie Rutherford, Karen Kolodziej, Elizabeth Findley and penalty shots by Shannon Maggio with support plays by Stacy O'Brien, Hillary Dattel, DeShea Blanchette, Alison McArthur, Dale Hille, and Destin Black dominated the entire game.

The defense unit of Anna Dean, Shannon Maggio and Jennifer Powers held OSSO on their own end of the field, while "Goalie" Lisa McGill stopped any attempts to score by the Breakers.

Congratulations to the fine U-14 girls team who will represent BAYS at the State Tournament.

Michelle Dorsey signs with USM

Signing day has come and gone, another season is still months away, and that gives University of Southern Mississippi women's basketball coach Kay James plenty of time to enjoy what apparently was a banner recruiting season.

She and her staff signed six players, two centers three forwards, and a guard. "We signed a variety of people, hoping that will give us a more balanced combination that will be better able to help replace the people we have graduating," says James. "We hope these players will be able to come in and give us some immediate help."

Heading the list of signees is Michelle Dorsey, a 5-8 guard from Bay St. Louis. She averaged 21.3 points per game along with 9.7 rebounds, 5.7 assists, and 5.3 steals for coach Willie Bradley at Bay High School. She was named to the all-district and all-conference teams three straight years.

Other signees include 5-10 guard/forward Gina Griffin of Jackson's Wingfield High School. She averaged 19.0 points, 12.0 rebounds, and 4.0 assists per game; and was named to the Jackson All-Metro first team, all-district, and Capital All-Big Eight teams. She will play for the South in the summer all-star game.

James added size with the signing of the Jones girls—6-1 Gwen of Jackson's Lanier High School, and 6-2 Kathy of Forest, both centers.

USM LADY EAGLE—Bay Senior High student Michelle Dorsey signs on as a member of the University of Southern Mississippi women's basketball team. On hand for the signing were, standing from left, Michelle's

Caring for Minor Injuries

The recreational or part-time athlete often experiences what appears to be relatively mild injuries. A mildly strained muscle or mildly sprained ankle are examples of common injuries which do not seem to warrant further evaluation by a physician unless the pain continues. When a minor injury occurs and the athlete elects not to see a physician, certain guidelines should be followed for proper home care.

Ice or another type of cold application should be applied to the injured area for 15 to 20 minutes at intervals of 1 to 2 hours. The ice should not have direct contact with the skin, but should be in a plastic bag or towel. Immersion in a pan of cold water (40 to 60 degrees) also works very well.

Following the ice application, the injured area should be made to move through as much of the normal range of motion as is possible without causing pain.

Between applications of ice and after the range of motion exercises, the injury should be wrapped with an elastic bandage to compress the area and minimize any further swelling.

Finally, the injured area should be elevated above the level of the heart if possible.

As long as the area is swollen and painful, the cold therapy, exercise and compression should be continued. When the swelling and pain have subsided, then, and only then, is it recommended that some form of heat treatment be

Football Foundation to honor Dr. Wolfe

Gulf Coast Chapter, National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame will present a special award to Dr. Marion J. Wolfe Sr. at the chapter's annual banquet Thursday, May 2 at the Royal d'Iberville Hotel in Biloxi.

Wolfe will receive the foundation's Contribution to Amateur Football Athletics Award at the 7 p.m. event.

Since 1936, he has been the school and team physician at St. Stanislaus, his alma mater.

Wolfe has spent many hours at Stanislaus football games taking care of the team's athletes.

He was born May 5, 1906 in New Orleans; attended Jefferson Davis Public School through his sixth grade; Jesuit School on Baronne Street through the eighth grade; and completed his high school education at St. Stanislaus.

While at Stanislaus, he was on the track and cross country team and also played on an undefeated basketball team.

In 1924, Wolfe was captain of both the track and basketball teams, and he ranked first academically in the school's graduation class of 1923.

After graduating from high school, he entered the school of medicine at Tulane University.

He also ran cross country and track and earned three medals while at Tulane, and was a member of Alpha Omega Alpha, an honorary medical fraternity reserved for the top 10 medical students in the graduating class.

In 1932 he graduated from Tulane and spent two years of internship at Charity Hospital in New Orleans.

He then became a member of the Mississippi Medical Association and began practicing medicine in Bay St. Louis.

In June of 1937, Wolfe and his wife, Edith, moved to the Gulf Coast. They have three children: Dr. Marion J. Wolfe Jr., Dr. Robert Wolfe, and Dr. William Wolfe.

sidelined for a while but later returned to regular duty.

The doctor also served as chief of staff at the Old King's Daughter and Son Hospital and the new Hancock General Hospital in Bay St. Louis. He and an associate, Dr. Edith Ballard, began the first blood bank in Bay St. Louis at the end of World War II. He was president of the Merchants Bank and Trust Co. and also the Merchants Insurance Company.

He was inducted into the St. Stanislaus Hall of Fame in 1973; and in August 1977 he received the Waveland American Award for his many years of dedicated service to the medical profession.

In 1923 he was honored by the Gulf Coast Chapter of the National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame. Wolfe is the only physician to have been inducted into the Hall of Fame. He is also the only physician to have been inducted into the Hall of Fame. He is also the only physician to have been inducted into the Hall of Fame.

St. Martin takes AAAA lead with victory over Rockachaws

St. Martin used the grand slam home run of catcher Kevin King to turn back St. Stanislaus 10-3 in district action Monday at the Rockachaw diamond.

Winning pitcher for St. Martin was Kevin Stewart who got relief help from Darren Dutil in the fourth inning. Dutil only allowed one SSC hit the remainder of the game.

St. Martin leads the 4A District race with a perfect 4-0 record, followed by d'Iberville with a 3-1 slate, SSC with a 2-2 mark, and HNC with an 0-4 record.

After St. Martin struck for one run in the top of the first off starting pitcher Matt Rosetti, the Rocks could not mount any attack in the first two innings. In the top of the third, St. Martin picked up two more runs to increase their lead to 3-0.

SSC fought back with two runs in the bottom of the second inning when Jay Artigues walked and Mark Logan doubled to left centerfield. A fielders choice by Mike Weems allowed Artigues to score. Logan was thrown out trying to advance to third base.

After David Pitolo struck out for the second out, Phil Wittman singled home pinch runner Clinton Edwards to pull the Rocks with a run at 3-2.

David Pitolo came in relief for Rosetti. The fourth inning was scoreless as neither team could mount a scoring threat. In the top of the fifth, St. Martin exploded for six runs on only two hits to put the game out of reach.

After Pitolo walked three batters, Kevin Stewart hit a grand slam home run to increase St. Martin's lead to 7-2. Carl Renshaw then doubled off Pitolo, and scored when Pat Mallards grounder to Rosetti at second was thrown wildly to first base. At the end of five, St. Martin led 9-2.

No team scored in the sixth inning, but St. Martin picked-up another run in the top of the seventh when Darren Dutil singled off pitcher Mark Logan, followed by Kevin Stewart's single. Logan then struck out King and Mallard, but Renshaw's fielders choice scored Dutil and upped St.

Martin's lead to 10-2.

The Rocks battled for a lone run in the bottom of the seventh inning when Jay Artigues led off with a single, and stole second. David Pitolo's double to left field scored Artigues. Dutil then struck out Wittman to end the game.

The next game for the Rocks will be Monday at St. Martin at 3:30 p.m.

IF AT FIRST YOU DON'T SUCCEED—St. Stanislaus second baseman Mark Logan (8) is out at first in the first inning of Monday's SSC-St. Martin encounter, but

DRUG QUIZ

QUESTION—How much money do Americans spend annually on alcoholic beverages?

- a) $50 billion
- b) $5 billion
- c) $500 million
- d) $50 million

ANSWER—According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Americans drink more alcoholic beverages (28 gallons per person annually) than milk (27 gallons per person annually). Over $50 billion is spent each year in the U.S. for alcoholic beverages, and over half of it is consumed by a small minority (6%) of the people who drink.

Correct answer - a.

QUESTION—Medical evidence suggests that sons of alcoholic fathers have brainwave patterns different from other children and that they may be more likely to become alcoholics themselves, according to Dr. Henri Begleiter of Downstate Medical Center in Brooklyn. How many children in the U.S. have at least one alcoholic parent?

- a) 2 million
- b) 7 million
- c) 12 million
- d) 17 million

ANSWER—According to the latest Harris Poll, 7 million children under the age of 20 have at least one alcoholic parent, and there is a very real danger that at least half of these children will also become alcoholics.

Correct answer - b.

For further information about alcohol and drug abuse write: Dr. Paul G. Jones, II, Executive Director, Christian Action Commission, P.O. Box 530, Jackson, MS 39205.

Your Pet's Health

Proper Care Essential Kidney Disease Common
In Older Dogs And Cats

By Dr. Clyde E. Taylor
Veterinary Medicine Specialist
Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service

The kidneys of dogs and cats filter and remove waste materials from the blood stream. They also regulate the composition and volume of body fluids. Kidney disease is any destructive process within the kidney. It is one of the most common medical problems of dogs and cats, especially older animals. If the disease causes enough destruction, the kidneys cannot perform properly, so waste materials or toxic substances accumulate in the blood. A loss of appetite, increased thirst, frequent urination, poor hair-coat, depression and/or vomiting may result.

There are many causes of kidney disease, including inherited defects, infections and toxins. Although the cause cannot be determined, a veterinarian can evaluate the severity of the disease. He can prescribe the best medicine for the disease.

The more common forms of kidney disease are often progressive and may become more serious, especially without proper care. However, dogs and cats are able to recover from some forms of kidney disease. Through proper management, most pets with kidney disease can live a relatively normal life.

If kidney disease is detected before serious complications develop, a change in diet may be all that is required. If the pet is obviously ill, hospitalization may be necessary. If managing the kidney disease at home, allow the pet free access to clean, fresh water. Protect the pet from stress, such as extreme exertion, excitement, and hot or cold temperatures. Put the pet on a diet that is especially formulated to reduce demands on damaged kidneys. If a veterinarian has prescribed medication, follow the instructions carefully, even though the pet may appear to be better. Call a veterinarian if any problems arise.

A veterinarian has foods available which are formulated by veterinary nutritionists for dietary management. They provide excellent nutrition, meet special needs and help pets to function in spite of disease problems. They are different from non-dietary pet foods in purpose, color, texture, ingredients and nutrient content.

Kidney prescription diets are dietary foods formulated to reduce the demands on impaired kidneys. The protein used in these products is of excellent quality and is provided in a reduced amount, so there is less waste material to be eliminated by the kidney. Because excess phosphorus intake can worsen kidney disease, the phosphorus level in these products is reduced.

Most pets readily accept kidney prescription diet foods. However, if the pet refuses to eat the new diet after two days, try warming the canned diet food. Mix warm water with the dry diets and wait 10 minutes before serving. Over a 10 day period, feed increasing proportions of the new food thoroughly mixed with the former food, ending with only the new diet.

It is important to follow the veterinarian's advice. Stay committed to the new diet, because it may determine whether or not the pet is able to live with its health problem.

Improving Cholesterol Tests

High levels of cholesterol is studying a "good" cholesterol in the blood are known to carry cholesterol (HDL) high increase the risk of coronary artery disease. That's why the American Heart Association carries excess cholesterol to the liver, which is the body's waste treatment plant, to raise blood cholesterol levels and a diet containing more than 300 milligrams of cholesterol a day (approx- lipoprotein Medical Center in large egg yolk). Help your heart by eating a prudent diet.

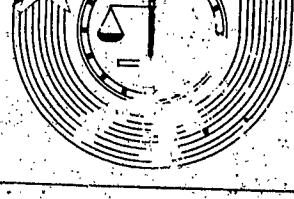

The AHA does not recommend testing the general population to find those predictor of an individual's persons with high cholesterol risk for coronary heart disease — because it is expensive, the test must be accurate unless testing can be made and precise, e continues. However, when patients have high cholesterol, HDL measure- other risk factors such as high blood pressure, smoking, and thus can- the AHA Nutrition Committee be used to derive reliable for the cholesterol level.

Recent discoveries indicate that the way cholesterol is carried in the bloodstream used to measure HDL. He is may be even more important evaluating and comparing the than the total amount. Certain "bad" cholesterol carriers seem to contribute to hard- ening and narrowing of the arteries by depositing chole- sterol in the arterial wall, while "good" carriers actually may remove cholesterol from the arteries.
